The Crystal Palace.

The destruction by fire of the Crystal Palace in New York, will be regarded as a public calamity, in a larger and fuller sense than these terms are ordinately applicable to the burning of a public editor. The Pal. ace was a vast structure, covering some two and a half acres of ground-its walls and roof being wholly of glass and iron. It was erected by an association in 1853, for the exhibition of the second. World's Fair, and was inaugurated with great pomp and display,-the President of the United States and various other dignitaries honoring the occasion by their presence. The Palace was eminently grand and imposing in its supect, and its lofty and majestic dome, as one of the prominent ear-marks of the me tropolis, was conspicuous at a great dis-

The actual original cost of the Crystal Palace was upwards of $700,000, and with all its beauty, convenience and magnificent proportions, it soon became apparent that it could never pay. Eyen the magic financier, P. T. Barnum, proved incapable of making it a paying concern, or even of extricating it from the doom of insolvency under which it had fallen at a very carly period after its erection. Various plans were proposed and tried in its behalf, bu all to little purpose, and at last it was leased to the American Institute at a year ly rent of $0,000, which was considerably less than one per cent, on its cost.-It has been offered for sale at $125,000, but with out finding a purchaser.

The Palace was built on leased ground belonging to the city; and the leave explring in June last, the Corporation ejected the agents and themselves took possession. There was, or was to have been, some legal question raised in regard to this proceeding. but we have heard nothing as to the result.

At the time of the fire, the annual fair of the American Institute was in progress in the Palace-a very large and showy exhibition, including the finest specimens in nearly every range of artistic, mechanical and manufacturing skill-the total value of which could scarcely have fallen short of Half a Million of Dollars. The whole of this vast property fell a prey to the devouring element.

A New CLAIMANT.—The first newspaper of September, answering to the present for of October, 1990, soresys the Boston Olice Branch. Its publication caused a prodigous excitement in this village, for we were but a village then, or collection of hamlets, values of five or in those and lighthing. rather, of five or six thousand inhabitants,) almost as vivid as that which followed, the other day, from the announcement that the Atlantic Telegraph had been completed. The Legislators took the matter up, denounced the sheet as contrary to law in its publication, and ascerted the grand principle of censorship as determinedly as it could have been done in London then, or as it is have been done in London then, or as it is done in Paris now. Louis Napoleon him self could not have made a greater row about a newspaper than was made by our about a newspaper than was made by our worthy progenitors. It was a little quarto concern, with only three of its pages in print, the editor, if such a heast of burden it had, having run ashore, when his work was only three-fourths accomplished. Only one number of this journal is known to be was only three-fonths accomplished. Only one number of this journal is known to be in existence, and that is No. 1, and is in the English State l'aper Office. It is supposed, and very reasonably, that it die! In being born. It was published by Benjamin Harris. He was a patriot, and was act in the pillory in Charles 11's time, then a not uncommon mode of rewarding services. uncommon mode of rewarding patriots for the part they took in promoting the gen-eral good. So that our first newspapel publisher was a man of some note, baring attracted royal attention, and occupying at that time a high position in the world.

THE FIRST LIGHTNING ROD. - In " Poor Richard's Almanae" for 1753, we find a description of a lightning rod, which is curious as coming directly from the hand of the inventor. The description is as fol-

LOCAL NEWS.

Lost Opportunities.

The opportunities for bettering her condition in a permanent and substantial manner by this city, that have been lost from inattention or let slip from mere indolesce, no means few or of small significance. Thus while New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and in fact all the reabsard cities, many with less natural advantages than Newport, have gone on from step to step, enlarging their borders, adding to their weakn and importance, and attracting to their shores the capital and enterprise of the nation, Newport has been content with barely maintaining the position she held at the commencement of the present century.

That there is wealth here, is evident from the unusually large proportion of elegant and costly mansions within our borders, inhabited by men intent, apparently on no other purpose than sitting down and enjoying themselves in " elegant case" on the interest of their money. If these men, instead, would send out such investments of their capital at home as would tend to promore the advancement of their own city Newport would to-day enjoy a loftier elevation than that pertaining to a mero sum' mer hotel.

One of the lost opportunities for bettering the condition of Newport, and the one we propose at present to refer to, is the project talked of some years since for removing the Navy Yard from Charlestown, Mass., to this harbor, and to accomplish which no outlay of capital was needed on the part of our citizens, only a succession of vigorous efforts in the right direction. At the time this measure was agitated at the seat of Government in Washington by Senator James, we were residing in Charles. town, Masa, and had opportunities of knowing that so far from the project meeting with any opposition from that quarter, it was regarded with favor; indeed, so anxious were the merchants of that locality to become possessed of the immense water front occupied by the Government for Navy purposes, that they would without doubt have taken it off their hands, dry dock, buildings and fixtures, at their cost, leaving the latter only to erect other and more suitable ones in another place, and remove their armament and stores into them. The Navy Yard at Charlestown occupies a water front of several thousand free, the need of which is keenly felt by Boston merchants for commercial purposes, and the presence of the Yard there is regarded as detrimen tal to the commercial interests of the city.

It is different with us. Nowport has a water front of sufficient depth and almost unlimited extent, that never was nor, judging from present appearances, ever will be, Government than they now pussess at Charlestown, which taken in connection with the fact of the superiority of access and its close proximity to one of the principal Fortifications in the United States, would have rendered it a much more desirable location than that at Charlestown,

Government did, at that time, seriously contemplate a removal of the Navy Yard to this port, and had the matter been sufficiently pressed upon them, would have doubtless done so. Since then many and costly improvements have been made in the Yard, and the matter has been put at rest for years to come.

Newport lost by this the sale of a large strip of unproductive territory, besides the introduction within her borders of a branch of industry that would have given impetus to her trade and added largely to her wealth and enduring importance.

LIFE PRESERVERS .- The growing frequency of accidents upon river and ocean steamers, has led to the introduction of a variety of contrivances for austaining persons whom such accidents may have thrown upon the watery element, till assistance can reach them, and every steamer engaged in carrying passengers is required by law to be provided with a sufficient number of these to use effectually in case of any occident to the vessel requiring thier use. Relying upon these, few persons travelling by steam river or ocean provide themselves with these protectors, always cumbersome and seldom at hand when wanted.

But it has been seen, as in the recent case of the Austria, that ships are not always provided with an adequate number of these, and furthermore that they are not always accessible and thus many valuable lives are lost.

The temedy to this appears in L. L. Moore & Co's Life Preserving Vest, a recent and very valuable invention, and one that from numerous tests has become thorough. It is easily unade, and is used for many purposes. Oil varnishes are the best for coating from measure and reliable, and The remedy to this appears in L. COLLISION AND LOSS OF LIFE.—The Steamer Empire State came in contact with the sloop Exchange of Westport, on Widnesday night, about 8 o'clock, and

The sloop was chartered by Capt. John II, Ford, of Bristol, who had brought a load of onions to this city to be shipped on board the bark Martha Anna, and was on her return for another cargo. Capt. Ford was drowned. But the crew of the Sloop were all picked up. Capt. Ford had on his person at the time, four hundred and serenty odd dollars, which had been paid him during the afternoon, for his cargo.

Head-dress of the Normandy Ladies A gentleman who visited Cherhourg during the recent feles, thus describes the head-dresses of the Normandy ladies: Conspicuous among all were les dames de Nor-mandie, in their cloth jackets and gowns which hung gracefully enough from them, through innocent of crinoline, -that they seemed to have applied au recess and appropriated to the head-dress. Oh, those head-dresses! they were quite a study. We traced them in all their variations, and atrove to fancy whether these variations de-pended on character, station or locality. We took the head of an old lady as our standard, for she wore her gear defiantly, as though she challenged criticism, and was determined to show the world what a Nor man cap was, and should be. sort of pudding bag, well cripped and starched, with long lappels sticking out behind, or perhaps more like a history's mitre, made of muslin, and adorned with wings, than any thing else. Diverging from this were others much higher and fuller and drawn in herose the forehead with hands of ribbon; there wings, too, were larger and finer, and turned up at the ends like horne. The damsels rore, or rather bore these, had a concious look of finery, which showed that these were the mode, and that it was a very superior thing to have large wings. Others again, had degenerated down almost to the cap of the grisette, but these must have been low people from other provinces, or from Paris; no rightminded Norman girl would have condescended to such a thing. Then again, there were all kinds of compramises betwixt the two-all, however, pretty, fresh and light; they set off the browned comels

THE COMET'S CURVED TAIL .-- A CORRES pondent, says the Louisville Journal, asked un explanation of the cause of the curved appearance of the correct appearance of the corner's cauchal appearance. We did not feel qualified to answer, although we thought it had as good a right to curl its tail as a cet, or have a kink in it. as a pig. But another correspondent, who does not speak ex cathedra from the tower of an astronomical observatory, and ack-nowledges himself a lay member of the scientific school, says the comet is not within the ulterior range in which the earth exerts an attractive influence; that the part facing the sun is of a concave form, from which the solar rays are reflected in a di-rect line to their source; but the velocity with which the comet is traveling, from north to south, necessarily causes the curve on account of the difference of time it takes the different reflected angles of light to reach our vision; and that if the comet were to come to a dead halt where it now were to come to a dean mant where it now is, the tail would become as straight as a loon's egg. After such a clear chicidation, of course we could not insult our corresponding to the state of the stat of course we could not insult our corres-pondent by asking him what he was driv-

A writer in the Washington Intelligen-cer argues that the system of trial by jury has proved a failure, and subversive of the ends of justice, from the fact, as he says, that turies in appear. that juries in general are composed of un-educated, prejudiced men, who had rather take sides than examine a subject, and that the natural results of such a system are cr-ror, confusion, and vexation.
